About the conference

What might the future of health and safety law look like now that the UK has left the EU? At this conference, an expert panel of academics, lawyers and campaigners will consider the dangers UK workers currently face, whether regulations may be influenced by future international Free Trade Agreements, and how the UK matches up to international standards when it comes to health and safety.

This conference coincides with the release of a new IER publication by Professor David Whyte and Andrew Moretta, which benchmarks health and safety regulations in the UK to the fundamental standards laid out by the International Labour Organization (ILO). The authors will present their findings and take questions from delegates.

Joining them on the panel, Thompsons Solicitors will provide an update on recent and contemporaneous health and safety claims going through the courts; union leaders will offer a view from the shop floor, particularly in relation to precarious working arrangements; the Hazards Campaign will expand on the success of its recent Manifesto; and speakers will explore how the dilution of rights acquired through EU Directives might impact on the safety of workers.

Who should attend

Trade unionists, employment lawyers working in support of trade unions, and academics and students with an interest in industrial relations and labour law.

How to get there

Train: Lime Street Station for British Rail and Merseyrail.

CPD accreditation

All IER seminars and conferences attract credit hours under the Law Society's Continuing Development Scheme and the General Council of the Bar's New Practitioners' Programme and Established Practitioners' Programme. Delegates requiring CPD points may be charged an additional administration fee of £10 to cover our costs.

Additional information

Name changes are accepted up until the time of the event. Delegates who advise IER of their cancellation more than 15 working days in advance will receive a credit note with 10% deduction for administration.
